Fighting for Equal Access to Education

Dorr recognized that education held the key to unlocking opportunities and empowering marginalized communities. She became a vocal advocate for equal access to education, fighting against segregation and discrimination in schools. In 1948, she joined the faculty of Tennessee State University, where she taught history and political science. Dorr's classes became a haven for students eager to learn about their history and the struggle for civil rights.

A Pivotal Role in the Montgomery Bus Boycott

In 1955, Dorr played a pivotal role in the Montgomery Bus Boycott, one of the most significant events in the Civil Rights Movement. She served as an advisor to Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. and the Montgomery Improvement Association, providing guidance and support. Dorr's powerful speeches and tireless organizing efforts galvanized the community, inspiring them to stand united against segregation.

Championing Voting Rights and Social Justice

Dorr's activism extended beyond the Montgomery Bus Boycott. She became a national leader in the fight for voting rights, working closely with the Southern Christian Leadership Conference (SCLC). Dorr's unwavering voice echoed through courtrooms and legislative halls, demanding an end to voter suppression and the full participation of African Americans in the political process.
